From some years ago, Manassas had better pricing and contract fuel available. It was inside the outer ring of the Class B and you could go in under the Class B; the ADIZ applies to all altitudes. As long as you are not driving into DC during am rush or away from DC during pm rush I think the flight time saved would balance the drive time

In have need to be in downtown DC later on this month ...

With $9/gallon fuel prices as DCA and IAD ... out of the question ...

I would appreciate some feedback from those who frequent the area ... which of the surrounding airports provide good fuel prices, access to DC, ease of access into the DC TCA , etc ...

Your recommendations are appreciated ...

Thanks Rocky
